THURSDAY EVENING, JANUARY 81

ANECDOTE OF RASPAIL,-Raspail, who died in France the other day, was widely renowned as a chemist before he was completely carried away by his political vagaries. His education IN ORDER TO REDUCE STOCK, WE was confined to l'Abbe Essserie, a Catholic priest as renowned for his science as for his virtues. In 1824 he presented the French Institute with the result of his first researches in botany. In 1840 he attracted once more universal attention, apropos of the criminal proceedings against Marie Capelle, accused of having poisoned her husband. M. Lefarge, with arsenic. The celebrated Orfila had made the legal autopsy of the deceased for the prosecution, and his report to the court was crushingly farge's counsel solicited Raspail to make a BOOTS & SHOES counter examination of the corpse.

This Raspail did at once, and his report was a complete refutation of Orfila's. He peremptorily demostrated that arsenic is to be found in every human body, and also in inorganic matter. The President of the Cour d'Assises, displeased at the prespect of an acquittal, treated with distain Raspail's theory. But the great savant rushed in front of the tribunal, and ex savant rushed in from of the tribunal, and ex claimed:—"Mr. President, justice exects that FOR 30 DAYS! my assertions should be proved; let me bring here my apparatus, and I shall take as much arsenic out of the wood of your arm chair as has been found in this corpse." This unexpected affirmation threw the jurymen's minds into the greatest perplexity, but Marie Capelle, although her life was saved, was sentenced to perpetual imprisonment.
